To Whom It May Concern:

I met Chris Chandler in the spring of this year and learned of his work with the American Millennium Project (AMP). Mr. Chandler created a national education initiative in Louisiana to improve the quality of communities by teaching local history and local cultures to the individuals/families and their guests within the community. This is accomplished by adventure tours to sites of historic and cultural significance to each community and organizing student groups to experience the tour.

Founded in 2000, AMP has grown to develop the unique story of the diverse parishes throughout Louisiana in a format that can be enjoyed by the independent adventurer, or as a group or club activity. AMP organizes and coordinates student "AMP Clubs" in local public, private, and charter schools beginning in sixth grades and growing with them through their college years. Extensive opportunities are provided in leadership and character development, financial literacy training and mentoring programs. In addition, corporate and private groups may participate visiting historic sites, museums, and cultural centers to tell the stories that make each site valuable and interesting to other communities.

The American Millennium Project has had success within other parishes of Louisiana and plans to expand to Baton Rouge. We look forward to working with the organization in the future and wish great success with this initiative.

Sincerely,

Chris Meyer
